Imagine you're the managing editor at a big New York newspaper in the 1920s. You're tasked with laying out the story of Jay Gatsby's life and murder. Using your knowledge of the events depicted in The Great Gatsby, write what you would consider the most important headlines corresponding to each chapter. As a class, decide what the top stories are and what is supplementary to the main story of Gatsby's life and death. The most important stories should go at the top of the page.

Connection Tree

Imagine a tree with each branch representing a character from The Great Gatsby. Gatsby himself will represent the trunk of the tree. Your task will be to examine each character's relationship with Gatsby and with one another. Some branches will lead directly to Gatsby, while some will connect with supporting characters. For example, Meyer Wolfsheim's branch would connect directly to Gatsby, while Gatsby's servants would connect first with Wolfsheim, then to Gatsby.

Pillars of the Story

Imagine Gatsby's mansion as having four pillars that hold up the roof. Imagine each of the pillars as a theme or motif presented in the novel, with the peak of the mansion's roof representing the main theme or message of the book. At the side of each pillar is a space to write down the theme or motif being presented. Each pillar should then be filled with events, characters, or places that illustrate that theme or motif.
