My family and I went to the beach last week. We stayed at a big hotel. It was very nice. The ocean was right outside your window. katie and me swam and picked up shells all day. At nite we watched movees with his parents. I think the ocean and beech is the best places for a good holiday!

Revision is the third step in the writing process. In it, you reread your paragraph and decide if the information is presented in the most understandable way. After you have made any changes or revisions, it is now time to proofread, or look for mistakes in your writing. When you proofread your work, you are reading it to find and correct any errors you've made. Proofreading is the fourth step in the writing process.

The first steps in proofreading are to:

1. Read your paragraph aloud again.
2. Examine your paragraph — look at the length, supporting sentence(s), and topic sentence.

The Whale Song

Whales can communicate with one another through sounds they make called “songs”. Male Humpback Whales use their “songs” to communicate to the females during mating season. Sperm Whales use clicking sounds to coordinate movement within their group. Whales rely on sound under water for communication and sensation because the other senses, like sight and smell, are limited under water. Whales use sounds for communication, coordination, and sensation under water.
