Electing a Government

ince the United States is a democracy, all of its government leaders or chosen by the citizens. The Constitution states all the requirements for each federal office. These must be fulfilled before a person can run for the office. A candidate for President or Vice-President of the United States must (1) be a citizen born in the United States, (2) be at least 35 years old, and (3) have lived in the United States for the last fourteen years. The office of the vice-president is also very important because the vice-president is the person who takes over as president if something happens that makes the president unable to serve. The Constitution also sets the term limits for all federal offices. The President can only serve two consecutive terms (a total of eight years). The presidential elections are held every four years. Elections for the Senate are held every six years and those for the House of Representatives are held every two years. A person who runs for a political office is called a candidate.

Put on Your Thinking Cap! A president can only serve two terms (eight years). When would this limit be very important - when someone was doing a very good job as president or when someone was doing a very bad job as president? Why?

Political Parties

In the United States there are two main political parties made up of groups of people who share the same ideas about how they think the government should be conducted. These parties are the Democrats and the Republicans.

Here are six writing tasks about the government of the United States. Be sure to think about all that you have learned about the United States government as you write. Write your answers in complete sentences in your notebook.

Every country on earth has some kind of government even though all governments are not alike. Organize your thoughts and knowledge about government and discuss the purpose(s) of government. In the United States' system of government, who or what are mo $1991 \pm 2$  The Constitution of the United States has a very important purpose for its government. What is that purpose? What is the Constitution sometimes called?

1994 #3 The Declaration of Independence states that all citizens have certain rights. What are three of these rights? What document gives the citizens these and other rights?

9% #4 Rights always come along with responsibilities. Think about the rights you discussed in Writing Task 3 as well as others. Discuss at least one of the responsibilities that comes along with them.

Task #5 All countries ha problems which must be solved. Some of these problems are so serious that they are present in most countries (for example, poverty). If you were president of the United States, which three problems would you try to solve? What would you do to solve them?

document limits the powers of each branch? What is this limiting of powers called? Do you think that these limitations are good or bad? Tell why.

Answer each question with a complete sentence.

- 3. Describe at least three reasons that could keep a person who would like to be president of the United States from running for that office. (Hint remember the requirements stated in the Constitution and also what it takes to run a campaign for the presidency.)
- 4. Before 1951 presidents could serve for many terms. Franklin D. Roosevelt was elected four times! The Twenty-second Amendment limited a president's consecutive terms to two terms. Tell why you think this amendment was passed.
- 5. What do we call the chief executive of a state? Discuss some of the jobs that you think a state chief executive would have.
- 6. Describe the qualities you think that a person who wants to be the President of the United States should have.

7. Become a Research Detective!

Use your reference books or the Internet to find out how many Presidents of the United States have not completed their terms in office and why. List the name of the president, the reason for not completing the term, and the cause for not completing the term.
