There are different types of bills. These are often called expenses in a budget. Some bills are the same amount every time. An example of this would be your rent or insurance. It does not change each month. This kind of bill is called a fixed expense.

Budget Tip

Put fixed expenses in your budget first. You have to pay them each month. They are your "needs".

A variable expense is a bill that changes. The price will be different each time you pay. Like a grocery bill. If you buy different things, the price will change. You should budget for groceries first. Then other things, like clothes.

Min-seo is buying a laptop. It costs $1,550. The deal is to pay for 36 months. Each monthly payment is $100. How much will she pay in total?

Should she buy it?
