Story Synopsis

The "Teeny-Wonderful" books are humorous, interesting, and very enjoyable. Both of the main characters, Carol and Wally, are very likeable. Carol is a tomboy with a temper. Wally is more intellectual but a good athlete, too. There is also conceited Kurt for comic relief.

Here She Is, Ms Teeny-Wonderful is the story of how Carol, a thirteen year old tomboy, takes part in a talent and beauty contest. Without telling Carol, her mother entered her in the contest, and Carol agreed to take part because, if she won, she would have enough money to buy a really good trail bike. Carol's hobby is jumping garbage cans with her BMX bike.

Carol runs into a number of problems because of the contest. She is terrified of flying in an airplane. The beautiful Campbell twins are determined to sabotage Carol by provoking her with their nasty insults into acting badly in front of the judges. Most seriously, however, the talent part of the contest could reveal her as a cheat because the poem her mother submitted was not written by Carol. It was one she had copied for a Language Arts assignment.

To counter all this, Carol has the support of her friend, Wally, who helps her get through the ordeal of flying. Her own basically direct and honest nature wins the approbation of an important judge in the contest. Instead of reciting the poem, Carol manages to jump six barrels in the talent section of the contest. She and Wally find ways to even the score with the conniving Campbell twins.

Carol came second in the Ms Teeny-Wonderful contest but she is not terribly disappointed. She is satisfied that she can go home having proved herself "the best jumper in St. Albert."
